ATD Fourth World

ATD (All Together in Dignity) Fourth World is a movement that gathers people from all backgrounds in order to think, act, and live together differently. We hold a vision of a world without poverty, a society where each person is respected. Poverty is an affront to human dignity, and people in poverty have unique knowledge and experience that can lower the barriers separating people and communities. Acting all together in dignity means acting in a way that allows all people to be taken into account wherever decisions are made that affect humanity. This central focus is a compass for everything we undertake, in the field of popular education, the arts, human rights, or Merging Knowledge. To learn more about our work, to volunteer or donate:

Joseph Wresinski

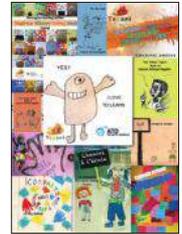

ATD's founder, Joseph Wresinski (1917-1988), grew up in extreme poverty, which fed his conviction that the only way to advance social justice is to recognize and build on the strength, intelligence, and courage of people in poverty. Wresinski considered people in poverty to be leaders with an important vision of a world where all people are accepted and respected. The projects he developed were not simply designed alongside people in poverty; they were consistently inspired by their unique experience and understanding.

Yes ! I love to learn

ATD Fourth World, 2017, 78 pages

This book from Tapori tells how children seek to make friends and learn together. In their own words, children from very different backgrounds express the importance of trust, in learning, working together and sharing knowledge with less able or disadvantaged children and the importance of trust in learning to go beyond first appearances.

The book can be downloaded here <http://en.tapori.org/2017/03/08/yes-i-love-to-learn/>

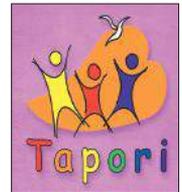

The Children of courage, Tapori minibook

If Only You Knew - Stories of Change

Friends of All Together in Dignity Ireland
Fourth World Publications, 2017, 80 pages

A collection of short stories written by members of ATD Ireland to pay tribute to friends who passed away too early and too young in recent years. It is a way to remember them and their courage to live a dignified life and ensure a future for their families. Through the production of this book, members of ATD Ireland created a community, open to all, where people were always ready to talk or listen to others.

Stories of Change

ATD Fourth World, 2017, 76 pages

These stories show that poverty can be overcome and present a positive message in contrast to the continuous stream of negative news that has left many people feeling discouraged and powerless.

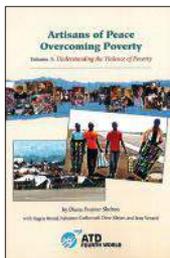

All the people involved, from different countries from south-east Europe, were interviewed as a first step to writing together the story they wanted to make known. Their stories can inspire others to get involved with those who resist poverty in their daily lives.

Artisans of Peace Overcoming Poverty
Volume 3: Understanding the Violence of Poverty

Diana Skelton, with Eugen Brand, Fabienne Carbonnel, Dave Meyer and Jean Venard

Artisans of Peace Overcoming Poverty introduces partners in peace-building whose efforts have too often remained unrecognized. Volume 3 recounts how young people in the Central African Republic continued organising Street Libraries with children throughout the civil war that began in 2013. In the United Kingdom, Switzerland, and elsewhere people, living in poverty are victimised by stereotypes and feared as a source of violence; but the greatest violence is done to them.

Artisans of Peace Overcoming Poverty
Volume 2: Defending Human Rights

Diana Skelton, with Anne-Sylvie Laurent and Marie-Ange Libert.

Volume 2 shares stories of defending human rights — in Lebanon, as Syrian refugees are welcomed; in the Philippines, thousands of families are displaced by floods and relocations; and in France, where poverty-based discrimination affects hiring, housing, and health care. Because participation is an integral part of human rights, this volumes describes how hundreds people in deep poverty scattered around the world communicate to make choices together for ATD’s evaluation and planning.

Artisans of Peace Overcoming Poverty
Volume 1: A People-Centered Movement

Diana Skelton, with Eugen Brand, David Lockwood, and Jacqueline Plaisir
ATD Fourth World, 2015, 143 pages

This volume introduces partners in peace-building whose efforts have too often remained unrecognized. Through the stories of children, young people, and adults who play active roles in reaching out to others, it retraces ATD’s history in Haiti over thirty years, before and after the 2010 earthquake there, looking for ways to rebuild the country with no one left behind. It highlights ATD’s main projects around the world: the People’s University, Merging Knowledge, the Street Library or Story Garden, projects for decent work, and projects focused on creativity.

Extreme Poverty Is Violence • Breaking the Silence • Searching for Peace

Editors: Beatriz Monje Baron and Anne-Claire Brand

ATD Fourth World, 2013, 90 pages

As part of its 2008-2012 focus on “Striving Together to End Poverty”, ATD Fourth World took action in order to develop its own knowledge of the violence experienced by those in extreme poverty and of the conditions needed to strive toward peace in their communities. Drawing the attention of local, national, and international organizations to the violence of poverty was also a priority. ATD Fourth World teams from 25 countries participated in this research. More than 1,000 people were involved. This book contains several full-color pieces of artwork created as part of the research. Citizens United for a Europe Active Against Persistent Poverty
12th European Fourth World People’s University

ATD Fourth World, 2012, 40 pages

In the context of a major economic and financial crisis, the poorest people are increasingly being ignored, stigmatised and harassed by the authorities in Europe. Europe will not be built as a Europe of human rights, of a democracy and of peace, if the poorest citizens are not a part of the process. Some 120 representatives from 10 countries demonstrated their mobilisation for a human dignity and the rights of citizens. They engaged in dialogue with with European leaders.

Eradicating Extreme Poverty:
Democracy, Globalisation and Human Rights

Xavier Godinot, translated by Angela Cady and Andrew Hayes
Pluto Press, 2012, 256 pages

After decades of failed development policies, this book outlines a radical new approach rooted in the experiences, capabilities and strategies of those living in extreme poverty themselves. Aimed at policy makers, researchers, students and academics, it uses life stories from Burkina Faso, France, Peru and the Philippines to show that people trapped in chronic poverty must be involved in their own liberation.

Not Meant to Live Like This Weathering the Storm of Our Lives in New Orleans

ATD Fourth World Movement members from New Orleans, 2012, 230 pages

In the months following Hurricane Katrina's devastation in 2005, ATD Fourth World members based in New Orleans traveled the southern USA to reconnect with displaced members and re-establish a network of support. Following this project, Loyola University hosted a seminar where wider issues of extreme poverty were discussed. What emerged from the visits and seminar was a truly collaborative and original collection of first-hand accounts by some fifty co-authors.

Improving Support for Families in Poverty Applying the Sustainable Livelihoods Approach

ATD Fourth World, 2011, 4-page brochure

People experiencing poverty are often categorised in terms of what they are lacking, their failures and their problems. Supported by funding from Oxfam, this research project demonstrates that taking a holistic approach which looks at what people have, and what they already do to cope with poverty, can help practitioners to support individuals and families more effectively.

Extreme Poverty and World Governance

Xavier Godinot, 2010, 62 pages

This paper, written for the Forum for a new World Governance, sets out, firstly, to place the eradication of extreme poverty at the heart of the international community's political goals. Secondly, it argues that the participation of the most underprivileged members of humanity in elaborating new principles for shaping world governance is an essential condition to the success of the undertaking.

The Merging of Knowledge

People in Poverty and Academics Thinking Together

Fourth World-University Research Group University Press of America
 2007, 490 pages

The search for useable knowledge of poverty and exclusion described in this unique book demonstrates the role that can be played in the formulation of that knowledge by academics, by professionals, and by people in poverty themselves. Here is a deeply serious and innovative effort to blend the special perspectives of academics, professionals, and disadvantaged people into a new and respectful synthesis.

Pauline, a Mother of Courage

Pauline Grace and Evelyne Louveaux, Pen Press Publishers Ltd, 2006, 114 pages

How would a mother feel if her young child was forcibly taken away by the authorities? And how would any mother react if this heartbreaking tragedy were repeated with no less than three of her children? This is exactly what happened to Pauline, and this book is the story of her life so far. Pauline's only crime was to be born into a deprived family. Pen Press says, 'As you read Pauline, a Mother of Courage, you will want to root for her, and you will certainly want to cry with her. You may even feel the need to reappraise your attitudes towards such people, who are more deserving of our admiration than our condemnation.'

The Poor Are the Church A Conversation with Father Joseph Wresinski, Founder of ATD Fourth World

Gilles Anouil, Twenty-Third Publications, 2002, 191 pages

Father Joseph Wresinski relates what he and the members of the Fourth World Movement have learned from the poor, as well as his hopes and fears for the poor and for the Church. He calls us all to see poverty not just as destitution or oppression but as social isolation. He believes firmly in the basic goodness of people, and holds out hope for the future. Anouil's questions lead Wresinski to reflect on the poverty and violence in his own childhood, the early years when he first began founding ATD in the emergency housing camp of Noisy-le-Grand, and the philosophy behind his approach to overcoming poverty. Artisans of Democracy How Ordinary People, Families in Extreme Poverty, and Social Institutions Become Allies to Overcome Social Exclusion

Jona Rosenfeld, Bruno Tardieu, University Press of America, 2000, 276 pages

Is extreme poverty inevitable in our affluent societies? The twelve case studies in the book show how very poor people, ordinary citizens, and institutions (schools, the government, the news media, the courts, churches, universities, public utilities, unions, and small businesses) succeeded in creating alliances. Tardieu and Rosenfeld present new ways to think and act toward overcoming poverty at the private or public local, national, or international levels.

Finding Work: Tell Us the Secret

Xavier Godinot, Editions Quart Monde, 1995, 48 pages

This book is an exercise in democracy. It looks at unemployment issues from a new angle: nothing effective can be done for the long-term unemployed without taking into account their circumstances and without their active-co-operation.

This Is How We Live

Listening to the Poorest Families

Fourth World Publications, 1995, 170 pages

In the first part of this study, very deprived families from the United States, Guatemala, Thailand, Burkina Faso and Germany tell their stories; stretching back over several generations. In the second part, the Fourth World Volunteers analyze lessons we learned from these stories. The families presented here differ from one another in their ethnic, geographic and religious origins. Their voices break new ground in poverty policy. To be successful, programs need to be initiated, implemented and evaluated with the people in poverty themselves. The underprivileged must be considered the principal partners in their liberation.

The Wresinski Report: Chronic Poverty and Lack of Basic Security

Joseph Wresinski

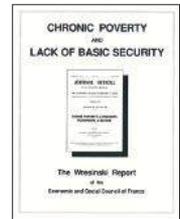

ATD Fourth World USA, 1994, 110 pages

Translation of the Wresinski Report of the Economic and Social Council of France (February 1987).

‘The facts presented in this report show that people continue to live in chronic poverty or to lack basis security in their lives. We do not question the premises on which our social protection system is based, but we must ask why the institutions charged with providing it become increasingly ineffective when people have the most need of them.’ Excerpts from the Wresinsky Report

(This contains a shorter translation of the main section of the report, published in 1989 under the title A Blueprint for the Nineties.)

Father Joseph Wresinski. An Advocate for the Poorest

The life and work of Joseph Wresinski, the founder of ATD Fourth World

Eugène Notermans, translated by Charles Sleeth

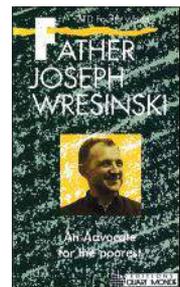

Preface by Geneviève de Gaulle Anthonioz

Editions Quart Monde, 1993, 64 pages

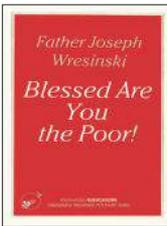

‘Father Joseph’s trust in all human beings, whatever their appearance, ideas or choices might be, made him a man who gathered people together. (...) For him, it was not a case of the rich on one side and the poor on the other. On the contrary, there were men and women from all backgrounds and outlooks to whom he offered new ethics in the commitment to ending extreme poverty, based on the need for dignity, respect and sharing which all people hold deep inside themselves.’

Blessed Are You the Poor!

Joseph Wresinski, Fourth World Publications, 1992, 287 pages

In this book, Wresinski connects parables from the New Testament to the lives of people in extreme poverty around him in France in the 1960s and '70s. In an era when some people felt the need to modernize biblical language, Wresinski argued that it was written directly in the language of extreme poverty.

The Wresinski Approach: The Poorest—Partners in Democracy

ATD Fourth World, UK, 1991, 60 pages

Introducing the people in poverty as creative partners in the process of change, the Wresinski approach breaks new ground. Through its pages, representatives of the most deprived families in Britain ask that their experience of poverty, and their own efforts to overcome it, be taken not only as the starting point in anti-poverty initiatives but also as the cornerstone of British and European democracy. With the very people in poverty as its focus, this book reinforces the efforts of a growing number of professionals and organisations seeking to listen to these people and act with them.

1989

Emergence from Extreme Poverty

Jona M. Rosenfeld, with Brigitte Jaboureck

Science & Service Fourth World Publications, 1989, 120 pages

Rosenfeld uses his social work training to analyze the approach of ATD Fourth World's Volunteer Corps members to overcoming poverty. Drawing lessons from Jaboureck's field experience, this book is designed for professionals and laypeople who seek to liberate families from deep poverty. It shows how disadvantaged parents can take on their responsibilities as citizens, participating fully as partners in the life of their communities.

Passport to the New World of Technology

Vincent Fanelli, Bruno Tardieu
Science & Service Fourth World Publications, 1986, 25 pages

The systematization of information is not a game. The poorer the children, the greater our obligation to teach them to use computers with respect. In the society these children will help create, computers will be their instruments of self-expression and affirmation; their keys to understanding humanity and the universe. The computer will enable these children to harness their passions and to set their inner-selves free. This will engrave in their hearts a love of that justice they will sculpt.

1985

Young People

Fanchette Clement Fanelli, Vincent Fanelli
Science & Service Fourth World Publications, 1985, 72 pages

'If we are together, we can break out of our ghettos. We want to be able to share what we have lived with others. We want to be respected, listened to. We want to live in dignity and joy. We want to learn skills, to be part of building the future with others. We invite all young people to join us.'

1985

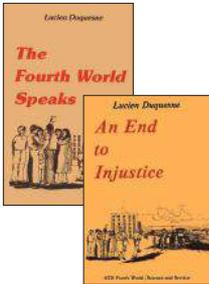

Pauline, Families of Courage

Pauline et Anneke van Elderen
ATD Fourth World, 1984, 45 pages

A monograph about the life of Pauline who lives in London. Pauline's story is one of violence, exclusion and shame, but it also holds moments of great hope and tenderness.

1983

The Fourth World Speaks / An End to Injustice

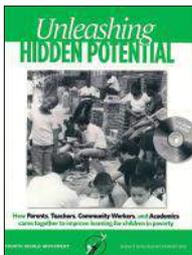

Lucien Duquesne

ATD Fourth World, 1983, 192 pages

These books are both translations from the same French book, one done in the US and the other in the UK. The book is the transcript of a hearing on human rights where people living in extreme poverty in France explain how poverty violates their rights and how they struggle to have their dignity be respected.

CD-ROM

Unleashing Hidden Potential

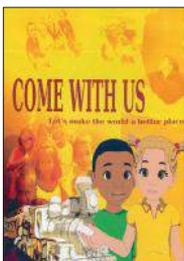

How Parents, Teachers, Community Workers, and Activists Came Together to Improve Learning for Children in Poverty

ATD Fourth World USA, 2003

The Unleashing Hidden Potential Seminar brought together parents, classroom teachers, community workers, university professors of education and sociology, and ATD Fourth World volunteers with the goal of creating a forum to share ideas and to better understand each other's perspective on education. This interactive CD-ROM incorporates the discussions and real-life examples from the seminar into a series of scenarios organized to be useful in training teachers or anyone preparing to work with low-income children. The written booklet that accompanies the CD-ROM explains the methodology behind the seminar.

DVDS FOR CHILDREN

Come With Us: Let's Make the World a Better Place

ATD Fourth World USA, 27mn., 2003

"I can't just close my eyes when I see so many children living in poverty. [...] So we decided to take the Friendship Train to find out what children and their parents are doing to change things and make children's rights a reality for everyone. This animated film shows how children in extreme poverty around the world lead the way in defending human rights. The film was part of a campaign marking the 20th anniversary of the Convention on the Rights of the Child."

Citoyens, les Universités populaires Quart Monde (Citizens, Fourth World People's University)

Delphine Duquesnes, Editions Quart Monde, 26mn., 2012, English subtitles

"There's no other place where I can talk like that." Every person living in poverty should be recognized as a full citizen: this is the challenge taken up by the Fourth World People's Universities. Delphine Duquesne's camera involves us in this quest and along the way we meet Aimée, Patrick, Jan. They experience hesitations, doubts and disappointment. When they finally express themselves, it is an achievement enabling others to learn from them.
